Notes

- 1 Global Navigation

This top navigation will appear on every page of the site. A mouse over on any of the menu items will provide feedback that you are accessing that item and if there are pages underneath, a drop down menu will appear. The drop down menus will allow the site to grow over time. It will also allow visitors to browse to any page on the site with one click.
- 2 WOM Definition and Welcome Text

The welcome message at the top is very helpful to first time visitors so that they can learn what the site is about. There will also be a strong image in this top region. The exact sizing of the image will be determined during the design stage. You will be able to edit the text here easily.
- 3 Featured Case Study

This block is for the case study you want to feature on your front page. It will include a thumbnail, the title of the case study (which will click through to the full case study page), the WOM category the case study is in (which will click through to that), teaser text, and a link to the "Case Studies" main page.
- 4 From Our Blog

This block will automatically feature your 3 latest blog posts. It will include an avatar of the person who wrote the blog, the title of the blog, the author of the blog, when the entry was made, how many comments were made (which will click through to view all the comments), and the WOM category the blog is in. If there are no comments on a blog post then comments aren't mentioned at all (so it should never say "0 Comments"). The avatar will be a stylized image similar to <http://www.viget.com/inspire>. Everything indicated in blue is a link.
- 5 Upcoming Events

This block will automatically show the 3 latest upcoming events from the Events page. They will be sorted chronologically. The date and location will be shown first, then the presenter (which also clicks through to their bio page), then the name of the event and location. Clicking on the event takes you to that entry on the Events page. The more link takes you to the Events main page.
- 6 Questions?

This is the contact MDR button. This MDR will lead to a form for the potential client to fill out. The exact sizing of this button may change in design. This is part of the expanded footer, which is now very popular on the Web. The expanded footer is featured on every page of the site.
- 7 Current

This block will automatically feature 3 of the latest updates you have done to the site. Examples of this would be when an article or presentation is uploaded. However, no events will be featured here. Visitors will be able to download or view the article or presentation right away when they click on the link. Icons will be used next to the file to indicate the type of file it is (e.g. PDF, DOC etc.). The file size will also be indicated. The "More" link will take the visitor to the "Knowledge Base" main page. This section is part of the expanded footer.
- 8 Newsletter Signup

The newsletter signup is less important than the other blocks on the page so we decided to place it at the bottom here. The visitor enters their email address in the field and clicks on "Go" to subscribe to it.
- 9 Highlight

This is a flexible block for you to feature whatever you would like. If this will feature the WOM wheel, then the "Learn More" link will lead to the "Services" main page. The WOM wheel will have clickable links inside so that the visitor can go to the Strategy page, Governance page etc. This is part of the expanded footer.
- 10 Footer

The footer links will appear at the bottom on every page of the site.

General Notes

- The frames around each block is only drawn to indicate where that block is positioned and will give you an idea of how much space it could occupy on the page. The design may or may not contain these frames.
- All blue text are links on the page.

Notes

- 1 Local Navigation

Depending on where you are on in the site, the local navigation menu will show you the other items underneath that menu item. For instance, this page shows that we are on the "Our Team" section and all the team members fall under it. As long as you stay within the "Our Team" section, this local menu will appear on the left. The current page is also highlighted for feedback. Visitors can also get to sub pages by using the drop down menu as described in the previous page.
- 2 Breadcrumb

The "breadcrumb" will show you where you are on the site. In this example, you are on the "Lisa Welchman" page within the "Our Team" section underneath "Home." You can click on any of those levels to go back a step or 2.
- 3 Main Content

On the team member page, a formal photo of that member is featured. To the right of that will be the member's title, email link, and contact phone number. The email link will not be a mailto link but will lead to a form that emails the individual (so the actual emailing and email address is handled on the server). Note, the phone number on the wireframe is the same for all members of the team. Below this will be their bio, outlining their achievements and education credits.
- 4 Related Events

This will show upcoming events that are related to the team member. If there are more than 5 related events, a "More" link will appear at the bottom of the listing.
- 5 Blog Posts, Articles & Presentations

Similar to events we will show blogs, articles and presentations that are related to the current team member based on keyword, category, or content. If there are more than 5 related items, a "More" link will appear at the bottom of each listing.
- 6 Photos

Informal photos that have been tagged with the team member's name will appear in this block.
- 7 Tag Cloud

The tag cloud will be featured near the top of every team member's page. It is a visual depiction of user-generated tags to describe the content of each category. The importance of a tag is shown with font size and color and the tags can be listed alphabetically. Each tag is a link. A good example of the use of tags can be found on <http://flickr.com>.

Notes

- 1 RSS Feed to Blog
The visitor can subscribe to the RSS Feed for the blog on the site by clicking on this link.
- 2 Most Viewed
This block will automatically be populated with the 3-5 blog posts, which have the highest view count. The title of the blog post and the time it was posted will be listed.
- 3 Recent Comments
This block will automatically be populated with the 3-5 most recent comments to any of the blog posts online.
- 4 Main Content
On the main blog page, there will be a list of blog posts in chronological order. Each item in the list will contain an avatar, the author, the time the post was made, the title of the post, teaser text, the number of comments with a link to it (if it exists), and a link to more posts in that category. The avatar will be a stylized image similar to <http://www.viget.com/inspire>. At the bottom of the listing will be the pager. The pager allows us to spread longer lists over more than one page.
- 5 Posts by Category
This block will allow the visitor to drill down to posts which are related to any one category. By default, the main blog page will list posts from all categories.
- 6 Posts by Team Member
This block will allow the visitor to select posts by any one member of the team.
- 7 Tag Cloud
The tag cloud will be featured near the top of the page. It is a visual depiction of user-generated tags to describe the content of each category. The importance of a tag is shown with font size and color and the tags can be listed alphabetically. Each tag is a link. A good example of the use of tags can be found on <http://flickr.com>.
